Burton Attacks Proposed War-Debt Cancellation

ACTION WOULD OPEN NEW RACE FOR ARMAMENT

Ohio Congressman Assails Expenditures of European Nations for Military Purposes

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Cancellation of European debts by the United States would only pave the way for a new race in armament and endanger the peace of the world, Representative Theodore E. Burton, Republican, of Ohio, member of the American funding commission, declared in an address before the Foreign Policy Association here today.

Assailing expenditures of European nations for military purposes, the Ohio congressman asserted that the military budgets of the leading debtor nations are many times their annual payments to the United States.

Great Britain spends $582,000,000 annually for military purposes and is paying the United States but $101,000,000 a year, he said. British military expenses now are $290,000,000 a year more than in 1913-14.

France spends $160,000,000 a year, he said, is spending not less than $100,000,000 a year on her military establishment. The Herenger debt pact requires a maximum annual payment to the United States of $17,000,000 a year.

"In view of the antagonisms in Europe and military ambitions," he declared, "if debts should be cancelled there would inevitably be an increase of naval and military armaments and thus a constant threat to the peace of the world would be created."

Settles For Half
Answering the European charge of "choking," Burton went into detailed figures to show that the United States had virtually settled European debts at 50 cents on the dollar.

"The arguments thus far presented to the American people have for the most part sought to show that the debt settlements are favorable to the United States, and should be approved by congress," he said.

"A time has come when there should be a demonstration of the tendency to the debtor nations. The United States has not been overly fair, but generous."

The United States cancelled 50 per cent of Great Britain's, 55 per cent of the French and 75 per cent of the Italian debt, he said.

"There is another viewpoint, which can be best illustrated by the debt of France," he said. "The obligations incurred by that country before the armistice aggregated $1,370,000,000; after the armistice and the close of the war, $1,370,000,000."

Says Claims Absurd
"If interest should be computed upon this last named amount at five per cent, a much less rate than France is now paying on loans, it would almost exactly equal the total amount which France is to pay under the proposed debt settlement, and thus loans and advances made during the war would be absolutely wiped out."

Burton characterized statements that the debt settlements will keep Europe "in servitude to the United States" as absurd.

He cited a 32 per cent increase in European exports to the United States in four years and estimated that American tourists spent $370,000,000 annually in Europe.

Great Britain, the largest foreign debtor, applies but four and one-tenth per cent of her yearly tax collections to payment of the American debt, he said.

R. Crum, 120 W. George, he learned that his father had worked on farms in and around Marion County for 30 years and 12 years ago had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Crum. The aged man never spoke of relatives the son was informed.

A brief account of the older Zenger's life was given by the son. He said that his father and mother had separated when he was three years of age and that he had been raised and educated by his mother, who died in Iowa several years ago. His father, a college graduate, disappeared and for years was heard from only occasionally. He gave up the work he had fitted himself for, the son recalled, and sought work on farms.

Letters to his son became fewer as years passed. Then one day the father appeared in Chicago for a short visit. That was the last time the son saw him alive.

After a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. Crum here and after arrangements had been completed for the transfer of the aged man's body to the private plot under the son's supervision, Mr. and Mrs. Zenger returned to their home in Chicago.

Miss Cahill is now employed as clerk in the office of Marion O. Stoll, the other Marion Township Justice of the Peace and her familiarity with court procedure is expected, like that of Mr. Justice, to assist greatly in efficient conduct of the Municipal Tribunal. Miss Cahill is a Republican.

Mr. Powell is a Republican, 43 years of age and married. He has had thorough training and experience as a bookkeeper and is now in the employ of the Oxford Co.

Mr. S. B. appointed bailiff is a Republican and for a number of years has filled the office of constable in Marion Township courts, now being employed in that capacity with Magistrate Justice. He is 39 years of age and married.

Mr. Kern, the other bailiff, also a Republican, 35 years of age and married. He is at present engaged in the plumbing business.

Salaries
Salaries of these court attaches are to be fixed by City Council and action is expected at the next meeting. It will be necessary to put the ordinance through as an emergency measure, due to the fact that not enough time will elapse before Jan. 1 for the customary procedure.

The statute which created the Municipal court here fixes $1,500 annually as the minimum salary for the chief clerk and $500 for each bailiff but it is thought that the scale fixed by Council will establish pay somewhat higher than the minimum.

Should business of the court prove to be too extensive for the force of clerks already named, another assistant may be authorized by Council later on, it was stated today.

IT'S an interesting story, and the public will wonder what the late W. K. Vanderbilt was doing all that time. He was a most affectionate father, gave about two and a half million dollars to his daughter's dead husband, to fix things up. He loved his children and would not have allowed any coercion of his daughter. Perhaps she was afraid to speak to him.

It is in all, a story as romantic as you would want to read.

THE Hall-Mills murder mystery grows more and more mysterious. Fingerprints were found and experts testified that they were made by one of the accused. Other experts testify they were not. Juries cannot read fingerprints.

WITNESSES swore they saw the accused in that crowded lane. Others supply alibi. It is now safe to predict the mystery will not be solved by any court decision.

Meanwhile, one intelligent reader suggests that Reverend Hall and Mrs. Mills were trumped to death in the rush in Lovers Lane that night, not murdered at all.

AT a sale in London, two portraits by Gainsborough brought $230,000 each. A portrait by Romney, who made such pictures of Nelson's friend, Lady Hamilton, also brought $220,000. A picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence was bought by Duveen for $370,000.

The town may never be rebuilt, it was predicted today. Businessmen were left staggering under their financial losses. Five of them carried tornado insurance. The town is without light and water. LONDON, Nov. 27.—A new magna charta has been granted to British peoples—and the British are owed to Ireland. The Irish Free State insisted upon changing the term "United Kingdom" and thus the Imperial Conference of Premiers was started on the path that wound up with a declaration of independence for the dominions. The premiers go home to their dominions equal to the British Prime Ministers and reporting directly to King George.

But Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin does not object. Indeed, this new freedom of the dominions probably will react as a masterly political stroke. In their new found "freedom" the dominions undoubtedly will be drawn closer than ever to the mother country, with the king as a symbol of united strength.

The unification of dominions as free states under the British crown, at a time when England needs the good will of the dominions more than ever, for extending around the globe as they do, they can help mightily to rebuild England's waning foreign trade.

Title Changed
King George's title will be changed, so as to eliminate "United Kingdom," it is known.

"George V. by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

It will be changed to read "George V. by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

Those who worked out this new magna charta as members of the committee on inter-imperial relations of the Imperial Conference are: Lord Balfour, chairman; Premier Mackenzie King of Canada, Premier Bruce of Australia, Premier Coates of New Zealand, Premier Hertog of South Africa, Kevin O'Higgins, vice president of executive council of the Irish Free State; Premier Monroe of Newfoundland, Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary; Lord Dickshead, secretary of state for India; and L. S. Amery, dominion secretary.

One of the changes between the various dominion governments and England and foreign nations must be established. This is one of the immediate problems to be ironed out. Several of the dominions already have their own diplomatic representatives at Washington.

The position of the dominions is best stated by this principle set forth by the committee which drafted the long declaration of freedom:

"They are autonomous communities within the British empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, in any respect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British commonwealth of nations."

C. D. & M. MOVES ITS OFFICES TO MARION BLOCK

City Officials To Move into Quarters Vacated by Power Company

Offices of the C. D. & M. Electric Light and Power Co. have been moved from the second floor of the Eagles Building on W. Center st. and painters and decorators are now preparing the vacated rooms for occupancy for the mayor and other city officials who expect to move in the first of next week.

Removal of the office equipment of the C. D. & M. was completed in about two hours, Thursday morning, the furniture, records and other property being transferred in interurban freight cars to the company's new offices in the Marion Building on S. Main st. The C. D. & M. has taken over the entire fourth floor in the Marion Building, which provides much larger quarters than the old location in the Eagles Building.

City officials who will transfer their quarters from the first to the second floor of the Eagles Building next week are the mayor, clerk, auditor, director of public service, milk and meat inspectors, sanitary inspector, engineer and heads of garbage collection department and bureau of vital statistics.

As soon as the first floor is cleared, workmen under the direction of former Councilman J. E. Sexton will start remodeling and redecorating to prepare quarters for the police department and the new Municipal Court, which is to begin operations Jan. 1. The police department will maintain its headquarters on the first floor while the work is in progress.

How To Employ Odd Moments.

Dr. W. F. Brook, of Indiana university, author of "Learning How To Study and Work Effectively," tells in a syndicated article how we can save one working year out of every fifteen if we will plan to use in a profitable way the half hour a day which now escapes us in the form of odd moments. "Every one will find many odd minutes at his disposal each day," says the doctor, "waiting for a car, waiting on a conference, going to and from work," and then he tells us how we may profitably employ these odd moments reading books. "It is said that all the world's greatest and best literature is contained in a hundred books," goes on the doctor. "You could read these hundred books in a thousand hours, or a little less than thirty-two months, at the rate of one hour's study each day."

There can be no question about it; the doctor is absolutely right in both his propositions. Get out your pencil and paper and figure a little, if you question his statements, read you will find that he is. There can be no doubt of his arithmetic, but there may be some regarding the advisability of following his suggestion regarding the employment of odd moments. The doctor talks a lot like some of the efficiency experts. They tell you how to do things, but the things in question may be too things being done.

By way of illustration, it would be the easiest proposition to lug about a piece of the world's best literature and read it at odd moments from day to day. But do we want to do it? Can not our odd moments be better employed? Would it not be far better to give our occasional odd moments to relaxation and rest?

We have sometimes thought that the greatest sin we Americans commit against ourselves is denying ourselves a little relaxation from time to time. Neither in our work nor our pleasures do we relax. Our nerves are tense. We are ever hurrying, hurrying on the go. We arise in the morning and dress hurriedly, eat hurriedly, go to work hurriedly, rush our work, hurriedly lunch, work again at high tension, hurry through our dinners that we may rush to some show, or to some neighbor's home, or even stay at home to read hurriedly and in two or three hours hurry to bed. If we play tennis or golf, or follow any other form of exercise, it is done strenuously, and we hurry to it and later on hurry back again.

We are feverish in our pursuit of riches, of fame, or political power, or whatever may be the goal we have in mind, and finally we attain it only to find that the reward is not worth the struggle. We have sacrificed health, denying ourselves the little bit of relaxation and rest our systems need. We are weary and we want to rest, and finally we do so in the cemetery.

A Weekly First-Class Service.

The fact that the United States shipping board has rejected the proposals of two of the bidders seeking control of the vessels of the United States being operated between New York City and England and Ireland and continental ports on the English channel and the North sea while still holding the third proposal submitted that of the Winchester-Gibbs people, under consideration goes to show that the third proposal, in the board's opinion, possesses more merit and would prove more advantageous than either of the other two.

The Winchester-Gibbs proposal is to invest something more than $16,000,000 in the purchase of the American merchant line, the chartering of the United States line and the construction of two new liners at a cost of $20,000,000. The American merchant line, which are now being operated by J. H. Winchester, the Winchester of the Winchester-Gibbs proposal, would be purchased outright and the two new liners would be constructed by the aid of the ship-construction loan fund established by the merchant marine act under which the government would furnish two-thirds of the cost of the new liners, the remaining third to be paid by the Winchester-Gibbs people. The government would retain title to the present vessels of the United States lines and hold a first mortgage on the new ships. The burden of operation at a loss would be taken off the government and it would get half the profit from the augmented fleet. If there were no profits, the government could foreclose its mortgage and get two more ships of the Leviathan class at bargain prices.

It may be wondered why profits can be anticipated when two vessels more are added to the United States lines, which are at present operated and maintained at a loss. The explanation is the addition of the proposed two new vessels. The fact that the government hasn't them at present is the reason for its losses. The United States lines, as at present operated, consists of the Leviathan, a first-class six-day boat, the George Washington, a first-class eight-day boat, and three cabin boats which are ten-day vessels, the Republic, the President Harding and the President Roosevelt. The America, an unusually large cabin boat, was gutted by fire and has not yet been rebuilt. The George Washington is of 23,000 tons and the Leviathan has an advertised tonnage of 50,000. In neither size nor speed can they be considered companion vessels. While other lines have weekly sailings by great steamships, the United States lines have but one great vessel at their command and it can offer sailings only every third week. The answer is that, so situated, it can not compete with other lines. With the two new vessels added, it could offer weekly sailings of six-day boats and be on a parity in this respect with other lines. This has been the dream of the Gibbs Brothers ever since they reconditioned the Leviathan for the government. "This was the plan of Chairman Lasker at the time the Leviathan was reconditioned. It has been the idea of all who have been prominent in handling the United States lines since they were organized. This consensus of expert opinion has long been that the United States lines can not be operated at a profit until they can offer weekly sailings by fast boats, and this explains why the shipping board is probably favorably impressed by the Winchester-Gibbs proposal. The board may not approve the price offered for the American merchant lines, but it does like the plan the proposal offers for a first-class weekly transatlantic service under the United States flag.

Anyway, it will have to be admitted that attempts to break prison down in Texas have been reduced to a negligible minimum during "Ma" Ferguson's administration as governor.

The Columbus Dispatch tells us that "a recently bootlegger invaded the sacred precincts of Cincinnati the other day and only the timely arrival of the police saved him from violence at the hands of the outraged citizenry." Cincinnati always was strong for the protection of home industries.

That it may not be erroneously assumed that there has been a marked change in life for women in New York City, it may be well to state that her woman bootleggers are so called as a result of the goods they carry rather than their method of carrying them.

A Washington special of last Wednesday spoke of five turkeys "on the ice in the White House," which should dissipate any possible assumption that there is no longer any occasion for the use of ice there.

Two persons have leaped from the Washington monument in the past ten days, and at last action has been taken to screen the windows. As we remarked some days ago, by commenting on the many deaths caused by leaping from high places, we will learn in time.

The old times whose memories go back to the days of the ship-plasters, as the small sized paper bills were then called, doesn't look ahead with any particular pleasure to the coming of the new one-dollar bill.

WILL IT COME TO THIS?

Week-End Vacations Give Tone.

BY ROYAL S. COLELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

There can be no doubt that an occasional vacation is a good thing for everybody. To go out into new scenes and to find out how people live in other communities is informative and interesting. When you go away and see how other people live you are usually glad to go home and get into your own comfortable slippers and eat your own delicious foods. But, when you sit down you have something to talk about.

The reason why two people get on each other's nerves is because they have no new thoughts to discuss. Pleasant emotions stimulate the heart and cause that organ to beat more powerfully and send a cleansed stream to every part of the body.

It isn't necessary to go to Europe. You can have these changes in your own vicinity. This is equal to foreign travel and will prove quite as stimulating.

You may think it strange that I talk about vacations at a "wrong time" of the year. There should be no wrong time of year when it comes to this subject. I am not talking about a great long trip somewhere. What I have in mind is a week-end visit to some nearby place.

If you have the money you can go to Atlantic City or Niagara Falls, to the nearest big city, or to some winter resort for a day or two. If you have very little money you can at least devote a whole day to something entirely different from your usual life.

What I have in mind is to stimulate you to do some unusual thing. It is the treadmill of existence—the daily monotony, the tedious doing over and over of affairs of your home or business—this is the deadly thing.

It is too bad for a couple to have to talk "shop" all the time. The affairs of the household and of the business have grown throbber through day's handling.

In order to be well and happy there must be a human interest in every life. To people can live each other daily, but at the same time they can get on each other's nerves.

This is why I want you to take an occasional vacation, or have a change of scene, or go some place. It is good for your health to go on a little spree at this sort.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

The value of a school education is the value of a citizen's participation and not the value of a man's intellect. There are too many boys on the sidelines in school games. There is too much of the professional aspect which looks only to the victory of the team. A wiser generation will reorganize school athletics so that the greatest possible number will get the greatest possible good out of games.

Every city has to bear with the nuisance of fake mind-doctors, near-psychiatrists, psychoanalysts who have read a book or two on the subject, and all sorts of pretenses that hang to the fringe of the medical profession. They are men and women without standing, without scruples, a menace to health and society. If the medical profession could clear itself of these unethical, unlicensed, and unwelcome hangers-on they would have performed a vast task for every city and would have relieved themselves of a lot of unearned discredit.

Speaking of the quacks, listen briefly to the story of the pastor of a noted church:

"There recently came to me in tears a cultured, well-educated woman who confessed that she had spent thousands of dollars on psycho-analysis, much of it on a man who had simply torn her to pieces mentally and who had repulsed her by his laughter and impudent attitude. He had brought many others to the same condition."

"She had then gone from this charlatan to a qualified and expert analyst, who confessed himself unable to help her out of her distracted state. As she spoke to me she said in calm despair: 'All I ask is that the fellow who got me into this state be compelled to kill me and put me out of my suffering, but even that comfort is denied me.'"

"The psychoanalysts of this city certainly need to be investigated, the good ones licensed and the bad ones jailed. Psycho-analysis needs a license and more licenses."

A life prisoner in a European city drew the first prize in a lottery—$30,000 in American money. And he will never be able to spend it. He will stay in prison. You say that is hard luck, but it is not worse than happens to men every day, seemingly, on the outside of prisons. They make money and leave it to others to squander. They have no vision in the spending of it. They, too, live in prison.

For every man who lacks imagination, who is bound by the walls of selfishness, whose vision does not let him see over the close-set horizon of his daily doing—every such man is a prisoner.

BY WILL ROGERS

A guy went to a hospital in New York and snopped around the halls all day. The hospitals are so big, some of them, that a nut could wander around that way for a week without meeting any person more than once, and this guy kept meeting doctors and nurses and patients and asking about different things to get a fellow to sleep good and plenty. He asked about chloroform and ether and gas and local anesthetics, and all the new fancy things. He spent a long time wandering around among people that had had twilight sleep, but he shook his head and said that wouldn't do for something serious. So late in the day the nurses and internes began to gossip about this queer gink, and finally they caught him and locked him into a kind of an office where there was a lot of doctors. The nurses that held his arms said: "He's kinda cuckoo, doc. Better handle him careful."

"Careful is the word," says this poor wretch. "And I've decided to take ether. You guys can start right now if you want to, only be sure that you've got plenty of ether. I can afford to pay for it all right, and it turns out good. I'll build a new wing onto this hospital."

So the docs got interested right away, and was awful nice to the patient.

"What's the operation you're looking for?" says the chief surgeon. "I trust it won't be amputation of a leg? Or maybe an eye that's got to come out?"

"No, this here is serious," says the guy. "I want to get this porous plaster taken off my back, and I ain't going to stand for no monkey business about it neither!"—Copyright, 1926.

NO SPOKESMAN BUT COOLIDGE HIMSELF, CLAIM

President Becomes Nettled
Over Numerous Oracles Who Talk Loud and Often

Washington, Nov. 27.—President Coolidge is becoming distinctly nettled over the numerous oracles, journalistic and otherwise, whose utterances from time to time purport to carry the weight of authenticity and White House approval.

This was made plain at the White House today on the heels of the latest announcement that Mr. Coolidge employs no "spokesmen" to represent him, politically or otherwise, save when he chooses to transmit his wishes to congress through duly elected leaders of the two houses or chairman of important committees.

The only White House spokesman, it was emphasized, is the familiar spokesman, who receives newspaper correspondents twice weekly.

Editorial Causes Trouble
The spark that aroused the Coolidge ire and provoked the White House announcement was an editorial appearing in a local newspaper in which Senator Fess, Republican, of Ohio, was quoted as saying that President Coolidge would be the Republican nominee in 1928, that Al Smith would obtain the Democratic nomination, and that prohibition would be the paramount issue.

This editorial went further. After suggesting that Senator Fess would likely become the president's oracle on the floor of the senate, now that Senator Butler, Republican, of Massachusetts, has been defeated, it also observed that it is likely Senator Fess may be asked by President Coolidge to be the next chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Because of the admittedly close relations existing between the Ohio senator and the White House and because the newspaper that published the editorial prides itself on representing the administration's views, considerable commotion was caused in Republican circles, and the echoes of it penetrated into the president's big circular office. The repudiation followed.

Wishes No Bitterness
The official White House spokesman gravely explained that the situation might appear to be a reflection on Senator Fess, but that the president, the titular leader of the senate, on Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the titular leader of the house, and upon Speaker "Nick" Longworth, the trio who usually are called in to carry the administration's views in congress.

President Coolidge, it was indicated, wishes for no repetition of the condition which has prevailed in the senate since Senator Butler came to be regarded as the White House spokesman on the floor. It is an open secret in Washington that some coolness existed between Butler and Senator Curtis, after the leadership of the senate. Apparently Mr. Coolidge has decided to check at the outset any suggestion of a new "oracle" to take place of his campaign manager.

Turn to Antiquated Lamps in Kenton's 'Darkest' Hour

Kenton, Nov. 27.—Antiquated oil lamps and lanterns, supplied by Kenton, were used in the city, without warning, was plunged into total darkness.

Business in the up-town district was practically at a standstill for more than a half hour, while restaurants, suspended operations temporarily as hundreds of hungry patrons waited during the greater part of the dinner hour.

In homes where the modern electrical appliances prevail exclusively members of the household were forced to forgo the customary steaming dinners and content themselves with canned goods and cold foodstuffs; in other homes relying upon electricity for lighting, members of the family were detailed to the attic to dig out the relegated lamps.

Streets, parked in ink blackness, were deserted except for an occasional pedestrian and movie houses were forced to delay their performances for many minutes.

The darkness continued until employees of the Ohio Power Company discovered a break in the high voltage line, extending Kenton, near Blanchard Station, north of here. The high winds had

The Packard Six Club Sedan is the ideal combination car for business, social and touring use. Many other beautiful and distinguished body types are available.

Seventy Per Cent Advanced to Packard Ownership

PACKARD has just analyzed the last two thousand Packard Six sales. Factory officials wanted to verify their conviction that the improved Packards were actually doubling the market for fine cars. The results of the investigation were surprising even to those in closest touch with the new trend in automobile investment.

For it was disclosed that 1,400 out of the last 2,000 buyers of the improved Packard Six had never before owned so fine a car—or even a car in the Packard Six price class. Seventy per cent had broken their previously fixed habit of frequently buying lower-priced cars.

The average mileage on the speedometers of the miscellaneous cars turned in by these Packard Six buyers was only 19,388. And the average age of all these cars was but two and one-half years!

Now, the significant thing is that these 2,000 new Packard Six owners say they expect to keep their Packards an average of 55 months—nearly twice as long as the cars they recently turned in.

These buyers needed only simple arithmetic to prove that they could actually save money by owning Packard cars—if they merely would use the desirable mileage of first-class transportation built into these fine cars.

If you propose to pay more than $1,500 for a motor car you can afford one of the new and improved Packards—beautiful, comfortable, distinguished, and with a performance range now the constant delight of every owner.

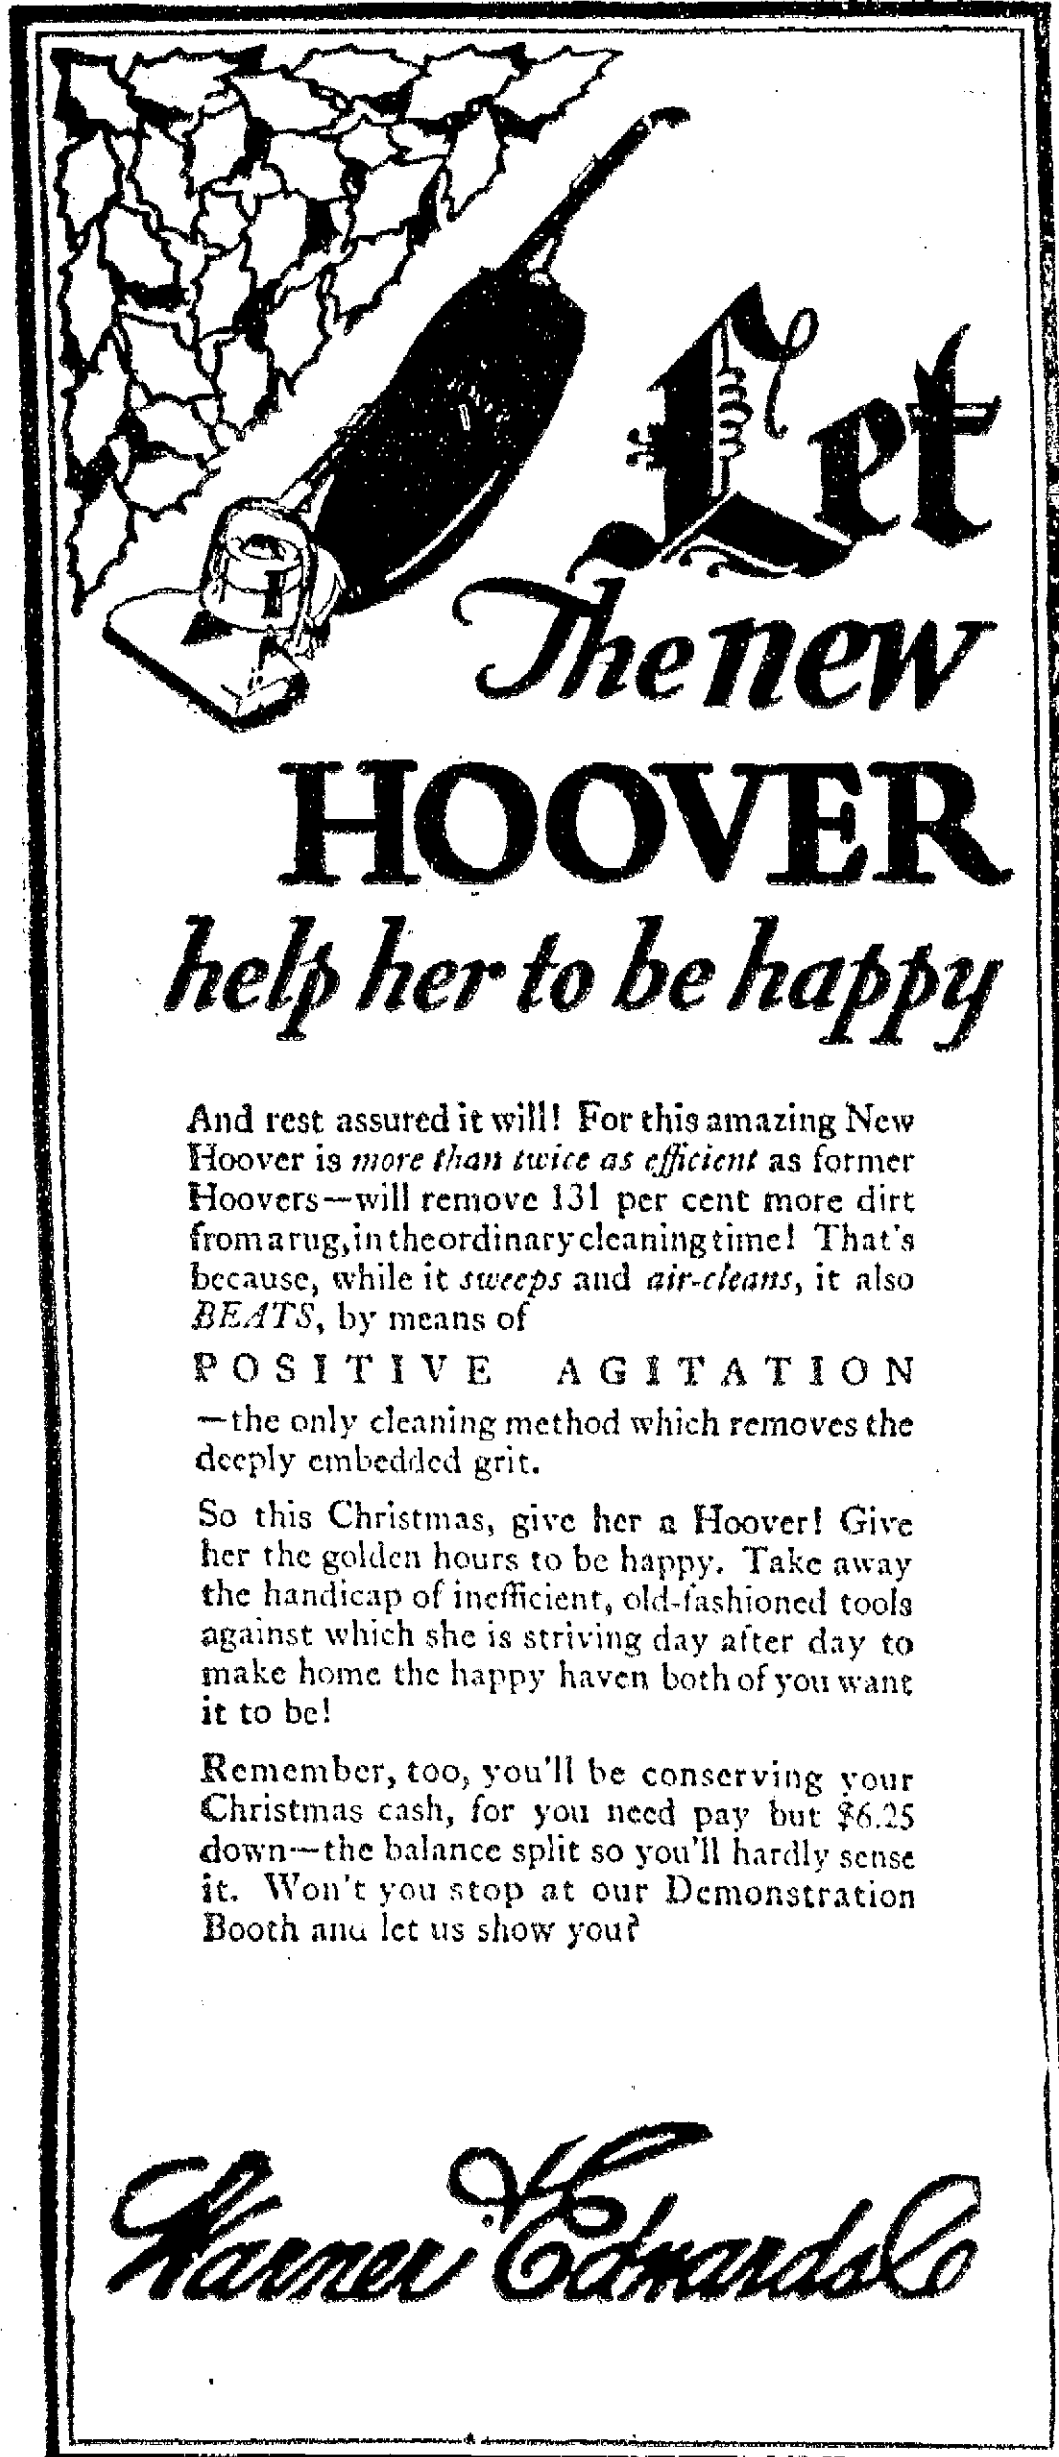

As an example of Packard Six prices, the five-passenger sedan is delivered at your door. You may spread the payments over a year if you wish. Our phone is 5124.

MR. AND MRS. SANTA CLAUS GETTING READY TO COME TO MARION AND VISIT CHILDREN DEC. 7; GET MESSAGE FROM CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

THE GARDEN OF HAPPINESS
TOP OF THE WORLD,
NORTH POLE

MY Dear Good Folks of Marion:

Perhaps you have heard of the brave and sturdy men whose daring flight in the north took them in an airplane over the North Pole, but, would you believe it, when these explorers made this historic trip they discovered my domain and had a peep into my innermost, mystery caves and learned of the Good Will, Kind Acts, Happy Thoughts and Honest Deeds that have kept my memory fresh in the thoughts of countless thousands of children for many generations.

Now that I have been discovered and my thoughts read and secrets explored I have decided to accept the invitation and my realm has sent the Marion Chamber of Commerce a telegram telling you that we have decided to accept the invitation while to visit them on Christmas Eve.

We will look into the stores and see if the merchants and business people have prepared to help me bring joy and happiness to the hearts of the whole wide world by carrying worth-while goods that can be used for gifts. I must be sure that there are useful gifts of wearing apparel, home necessities, automobiles, and accessories for automobiles, jewelry, clothing, candies, goodies, and last but not least, toys and dolls and playthings.

Just as we were planning to surprise everyone by unexpectedly dropping in on them, we received a Love-O-Gram from the Marion Chamber of Commerce, saying that the good people of Marion had asked that they arrange to get word to us through Star-Light and his

We will arrive in Marion, Tuesday, Dec. 7, and I want all the boys and girls of the city to visit us at our downtown headquarters. Did you ever see a reindeer? If you never have I invite you to come and see Danee, Frances and the other reindeer. You know I have been driving reindeer now for many years and I sometimes forget that you may never have seen one and may not know about their habits.

When I arrive in Marion with my reindeer I want you to notice one thing about them. No two reindeer ever had horns just alike and no single reindeer ever had two horns that matched.

At the Top Of The World in our reindeer herd you would notice if you could be here that when reindeer are not feeding or resting their speed most of the time is spent in the harness, which while in the harness is very tender. By throwing their heads back over their shoulders they cause the horns to curve forward, but most of the training of the horns is done by their hind feet.

Reindeer Train Hints
This they do by continually stroking the horn to bend it forward; they start prongs where they please by kicking the tender shaft in a spot till it bends, when the hind will start; by turning their eyes in the sockets they seem to be able to look at their horns and endeavor to make one correspond with the other. Seldom or never have they horns alike. I once had a reindeer in my herd that was blind in one eye and was not able to train his horn on the blind side, so that it grew in an awkward shape. Another deer was injured in its thigh and was not able to use its hind foot to shape its horns so that they grew up in straight shafts. Another interesting fact is that there is an oil duct between the top of the hind feet, and when the animal sheds its horns, he keeps the place well oiled by rubbing his foot over it.

The reindeer have an extra appendage which at the Top Of The World is known as a reindeer nose. If you could be in the Garden of Happiness and look at them you, there would want your eye nothing but long stretches of unbroken snow with neither a tree nor a bit of living green to color the landscape. The reindeer know though that in underneath the snow Nature has provided a food that they love, and so they paw and nose through the snow crust and nibble the layer of green moss.

I want every boy and girl who reads this to see my reindeer. I want to meet all of you and learn what you want for Christmas. I will write you another letter Monday and in it I will tell you something about my workshops in the Garden of Happiness at the Top Of The World and about the Brownies, Fairies and Elves that make dolls for the little girls and skates and engines and trains of cars for little boys.

Yours faithfully,
SANTA CLAUS.

SALE OF AUTO TAGS TO START IN CITY DEC. 1

Auto Club Preparing To Handle
License Plates Again This Year

Sale of automobile license tags for 1927 is scheduled to start here on Dec. 1 and special preparations for handling the work are now under way at offices of the Marion Auto Club at Hotel Harding. A force of five extra clerks has been employed to assist Mrs. D. V. Gallagher, secretary of the club, in conducting the sale and it is expected that this number will be doubled when the usual last-minute rush starts late in December.

In order to facilitate the annual distribution of tags and to manage the sale with the least possible inconvenience to the public, Mrs. Gallagher and other club officials urge auto owners to obtain their licenses early in the month. In former years, it is noted, many have followed the practice of waiting until the final days without any apparent reason, creating unnecessary rush and congestion at the auto club offices.

Distributed by Trucks

License plates are being distributed to practically all counties in state trucks. Marion County's first consignment, totaling 10,000 is due to arrive Monday or Tuesday. This will supply the demand for the early winter months and another shipment of 10,000 tags will come in April.

The plates this year are unusually attractive, being dark blue numerals embossed on a gray background.

The counter at the Auto Club offices has been considerably enlarged as a special provision for the license distribution.

The work will be in complete charge of Mrs. Gallagher, whose experience in three annual license sales in this city and in several at Cleveland while she was connected with the Auto Club there is of exceptional value in handling the undertaking here.

The property action was heard in court yesterday and continued until today.

Clyde L. King today filed an answer and cross-petition to the cross-petition

STRIPES RETURN IN CLOTHING FOR MEN

Fashions in Suits And Coats Pointing Stripeward, Claim

Paris, Nov. 27.—Emulating the women, men's fashions seem to be pointing stripeward.

Pencil stripes are undergoing a marked revival, particularly among men who wish to stimulate slenderness. Autumn lounge suits of blue unfinished weaves are set off with white pencil stripes lending apparent height to the figure. The stripes may be spaced half an inch, three-quarters or even an inch apart.

Geometric handkerchiefs with satin stripes in the border are some of the new types exhibited for men's use. Both light and dark shades are shown.

And still speaking of stripes, scarves in thick weaves are shown with grey borders and centers in Indian blanket patterns, others having broad zigzag stripes in two colors.

Recessed suit suspenders are seen in one of the smart shops for men. The fashions are used in brown with white, blue with white and yellow. The pattern is a diamond shape, usually in the dominating color. Another half-halter is showing them in a soft felt, or something which looks like it. Brown and Quaker gray are among the tones.

Dressing gowns of heavy quilted silk are very warm and elegant. They come in bright colors, lined in satin of a contrasting tone. One in golden tan is lined with brown satin and has collar, cuffs and belt of the same. They are well tailored with breast and side pockets.

Another new dressing-gown comes in the popular Tuxedo model in royal blue, brocade with an indistinct oriental design picked out in dull silver and crimson. The revers of the collar, belt and pocket trimmings, as well as the lining are of plain blue satin.

Geometrical patterns are worn in gay colors for men's pull-over sweaters. Sleeveless sweaters come in numerous patterns, while the sweater vest often keeps to the popular stripes.

"SLEEPER BESIDE DEAD MAN," SERMON SUBJECT

Wichita, Kan., Evangelist Sings and Plays During Service Last Night

"The Sleeper Beside the Dead Man" was the subject of a sermon preached by Rev. W. R. Cain of Wichita, Kan., who is conducting a revival at the Nazarene Church, at services last night. His text was taken from Ephesians 5:14, "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light." "The Bible is full of photographs," Rev. Cain said, "the Holy Ghost is faithful and permits us to see ourselves as we are in the sight of God. God swings danger signals across the path of every sinner. The church is full of dead people, spiritually speaking. Carnality is doubtful above all things and it is dangerous to keep it in our heart."

Rev. Cain sang and played on the guitar, "The Man of God." Services will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight and will conclude tomorrow night. "The Awakening Oil" was the subject of his sermon Thursday night while Wednesday night he spoke on the subject "Abraham Walking in Sin."

KARL DOMBAUGH FUNERAL TO BE HELD MONDAY

Services for Auto Crash Victim To Be Held at Epworth Church

Funeral services for Karl Dombaugh, 20-year-old Marion youth who was killed in an automobile accident near Troy, N. Y., Thursday morning, will be held at Epworth M. E. Church at 2 o'clock, Monday afternoon, presided by private services at the home, 440 E. Church-st, at 1:30 o'clock. Services will be in charge of Dr. B. L. George, pastor of Epworth Church.

The train bearing the body of the accident victim arrived in Marion early this morning from Troy. On the same train were Mr. and Mrs. Victor L. Dombaugh, the youth's parents, who went to Troy Thursday night following receipt of the news of their son's death, and Fred Hogg of Philadelphia, a close friend and classmate of young Dombaugh at Reusseler Polytechnic Institute at Troy. Mr. Hogg will remain until Monday and attend the funeral services as a representative of the college and DKE fraternity. Karl Dombaugh was prominent and exceptionally popular in the activities of this fraternity.

School Tribute
Special services in tribute to the memory of the Marion boy, who was one of the most popular students at Reusseler Institute, were conducted at the funeral parlors in Troy shortly before the body was taken to the train for removal to Marion. These ceremonies, in charge of the pastor of a Troy church, were attended by all members of the institute's faculty and a large representation of the students and the DKE fraternity.

The condition of Arturo Herrera, son of a former president of Guatemala who was driving the car which carried the Marion boy to his death, and whose skull was fractured, is reported as critical but physicians at the Troy hospital state that they have hopes of his recovery. He continues in a semi-conscious state and it will probably be several days before the outcome of his injuries can be ascertained.

Two other occupants of the automobile, Robert Starkhouse of Springfield, O., and Frederick Bourke of Detroit, were uninjured. The four boys were all members of the Senior class at Reusseler Institute and were returning from a dance at Union College, Schenectady, when the accident occurred.

Absolve Driver
Absolutely no blame is placed upon Herrera or any other occupants of the car, Mr. Dombaugh, stated today. The accident happened on a detour road, the main highway having been closed, he stated, Schenectady and Troy. The wheels of the machine ran into deep ruts that had been worn in the detour and this resulted in the car swerving from the roadway. Herrera was driving at moderate speed, Starkhouse and Bourke state.

In leaving the roadway the machine sidwheeled a pole standing in the ditch, carving in a window on the side where the Marion boy was sitting. His skull was fractured when struck by a part of the broken window.

The accident occurred about 4 o'clock Thursday morning and young Dombaugh died at the Troy hospital two hours later without having regained consciousness. The services of three physicians and eight nurses were employed in a futile attempt to save the Marion youth's life.
